This could be in art, sport, or stage and music. At a time when academic performance is publicised in SATs results and supposedly measures the success of a school, we need to be aware that these only tell half a story. I went to see "Rainmaker" on Monday, and was delighted. When those children grow older, they will remember standing and performing on that stage. They will remember their courage, which brings them confidence. They will remember the applause and appreciation, which will boost their self esteem. They will remember the teamwork, which makes them value their contribution to a collective effort. They will remember the story and the morality contained within. All these outcomes will make them better people. Success in academia is only half the story. Let us celebrate success in all its guises. Well done everyone". <hr/> Book Swap We are currently in the process of setting up a parent/teacher book swap at Hambleton. Launching in the Spring term, there will be a bookshelf in the entrance porch with books for staff and parents to share. If you have any books that you would be happy to donate to get us started, please hand them in to Miss Clay/Mrs Shaw before Christmas.
